Specialist Software Consultancy Opens in Dublin

Scope Software Ltd a specialist software consultancy, has announced the opening of its Dublin office. Scope offers high-level strategic and technical consultancy services to software companies looking to expand into global markets, as well as to companies who have already gone global which but require assistance with process and technical improvements.

“It’s a demanding and rewarding time to focus on the global software sector”, commented Scope’s founder, Dave Ayres. “The current uncertain economic climate provides new challenges for companies in terms of maximising their return on investment in processes, technology and people. Our goal is to help companies both from a strategic and technical perspective to maximise return on international investments and increase overall profitability.”

Estimates have shown that the growing demand for Internationalisation services will make it a billion-dollar industry by the middle of this decade.

Dave Ayres - Scope Software’s founder - is no stranger to the international software sector, having worked on both the software publisher and service provider side. Most recently he founded and developed DLG Software Services, a highly-acclaimed software testing and localisation services provider. DLG was acquired by Gladstone plc in 2000.

Scope Software will be opening a US office by the end of 2003.
